All this factors enhances a strong and solid cordial relationship amidst a Boss and secretary..

Introduction

Business Owners and managers are always in need of information that decisions could be based for optimum results. Consequently, they are always in need of competent and effective information analysts and communication assistants. The progress of any organization depends solely on the quality of its decision making, and decisions that achieves desired result is a direct function of the quality and timeliness of information available to the Executive, he cannot; but pay attention to his information analysts.

According to Eni (1991). The services of secretary's cannot be over-emphasized in every organization. Therefore executives needs well groomed secretaries to carry out their duties successfully and effectively; a secretary according to Eni (1991) is "A member of the clerical staff whose fundamental functions are concerned with the preparation, presentation & preservation of correspondence and communication of all forms within the organization and to its customers”.

A secretary therefore, is that Executive assistant, who ensures that official information is organized and disseminated in such a way that the manager scores maximum advantages from his decisions.

It is virtually not enough to offer all the secretarial skills which a boss might need , or even those personal attributes such as PUNCTUALITY, RELIABILITY, DISCRETION, TACT, CORIDIAL etc, which a good secretary displays. You have to become a valuable part of the management team, knowing the polices of the firm as well as your boss. Able to play an indispensable and active role in his work.

Given the relationship, information and its management has on the success or failure of the organization, and by implication on the Manager he can't be interested on who becomes his secretary.

Furthermore, the secretary is an alter ego to the executive or boss and the organization at large.

The relationship between the boss and his secretary is therefore one of “Partnership” in the office. That partnership can be an existing adventure, giving enormous job satisfaction, and leading to the advancement of both the boss and secretary.

The word “Secretarial Field” is one in which many people both male and female genders single or married are interested. Yet many people after choosing it as a career fail to meet up the demand's of the chief executives. The career is one that has been recording large number of students in the polytechnic's and universities studying secretarial studies now known as Office Technology and Management (OTM).

It is in the light of the above, that this research work was carried out to identify the instincts/factors that motivates the chief executives in selecting the personal secretaries.

No organization can function effectively without mutual understanding between the boss and secretary. Both the boss and the secretary need to see themselves as partners in progress when they are working they must be able to trust themselves in the organization. There should be a cordial relationship between them which helps in the office growth.

Furthermore to achieve a good working relationship between the boss and secretary there should be a rule made by the organization to be guiding them in their activities. This rule is usually based on the principle of assistance whereby they are aware that the overall job cannot be done without the help of each other. The assistance results to satisfaction from the mutual association. Satisfaction is of great importance in any organization because it is usually transferred to the clients which creates the impression that work is in progress.

When the boss or the secretary has no satisfaction in the job performance of the other the aim of such relationship will be jeopardized. For instance some bosses who are so strict on assigning of duties could compel their secretaries to finish Work of one week in a day. When they fail to fulfill such desire their boss becomes so aggressive on them. This type of attitude is detrimental to their relationship in the organizational productivity.

The boss should know that the secretary is only a human being who could not be equated to a machine and that she could make mistake as well. According to Elegido (1996) he stated that each time we choose to disregard the well being of other people we reduce at least marginally the importance of that well being for us and the strength of the bonds which unite us to them. Choosing to act in that way also reduces the importance we give to acting on the basis of knowledge and understanding as opposed to being carried away by flights of emotions.

On the other hand, the secretaries should have high esteem for their boss by doing the duties assigned to them diligently to avoid making of mistakes that could result to losses in the organization

The boss and the secretary are like a corner stone of any organization cannot do without them. Therefore they have to resist any obstacle that can hamper their relationship from being rewarding as the relationship is ought to be beneficial to the organization as regards to increase in productivity revenue and expansion of office viewing from Elegido (1996) he stated that in trying to promote human fulfillment good intensions are not enough one must endeavour to use effective means.

Statement of Problem

Some bosses do not acknowledge the roles of secretaries in the organization, that is the part they play. At times bosses also show non-challant attitude to work by leaving everything to their secretaries.

Besides, the boss and secretary do not often derive satisfaction from their mutual association which hampers the office growth.

DISCUSSIONS

On the question on the factors that enhance Boss/Secretary relationship in work place, it was revealed that the exhibition of the secretaries' skills are important. According to Eltori (1982) "the Boss expected the secretary skills to be exhibited accurately without errors and mistakes and is expected to be typing at least 60 words a minute and taking down shorthand dictations at the rate of 120 words per minute. The secretaries instinct for co-operation in achieving his executives objectives is when he/she dispose the proficient secretaries skill and once having a pleasant manner helps in achieving the set goal.

It was revealed that most of the respondents agreed that the factors that enhance Boss/Secretary relationship is the role of the secretary in organizing the Boss schedule of duties; like planning Journey's or tour, Receiving information etc. a secretary's prime factor is to be of great assistance to her Boss "Eni" (1990). The secretary's qualification affects the field of work, this is because most Bosses like choosing secretaries with proficient skills in performance. These qualification will enable the secretary to be all made, both in shorthand and typing and of course be able to manage the affairs of the organization with tact. Finally, being polite having Business sense of Initiative asking intelligent questions and listening to instructions, planning, co-ordinating and having organizing skills shows how she psychologies Irate callers in the work-place. All these accrue to the factors that enhance the instincts of a Boss towards the secretary in the work-place.

CONCLUSIONS

Based on the finding of the study, the following conclusions were made.

1. Most Bosses expects the secretary to display fully her secretarial skills
2. The secretary command of English and word processing should be sound and proficient enough
3. Bosses like secretaries that have more organizing ability to be effective and the secretary's instinct for co-operation to be perfect and appealing in achieving his boss objectives
4. Bosses like secretaries that are Resourceful in their ability to exercise mature judgement
